EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS WEDNESDAY.

Partial Degradation But Aggregate De-The degeneracy of particular classes, of families, and the decline of particular nations and peoples, are the evidence that-with the exaggerations which always attach to traditions, which make it easy to believe that a few centuries ago men were giants or demigods, or lived a thousand years-form the basis of the popular idea that mankind is degenerating. If the common idea of the prevalent decline in any age, had been the ratio of degeneracy, mankind would have degenerated into reptiles before the earth had been five hundred years old, and instead of our proud descent from the monkeys, we should have had an ignominious descent to the monkeys.

The same delusion prevails in regard to political parties in this country. The peronal ambition, jealousies, hates and quarrels of politicians, are forgotten, while their virtues are stalted until they appear superhuman. We are all disposed to believe that political parties have been debased within our own observation. Probably it is only the ancient delusion. The United State Senate is universally adduced as an illustration; but while different parties and sections decline in the ability or civilization of their representation, it is probable that the aggregate ability of the Senate was never greater than now. Even if it was, the marked increase in ability in the House over the time when Clay, Webster, Hayne and Calhoun ledthe Senate, maintains the average development and improvement of the whole repre-

In nothing is the decline so manifest as in the representation of the peculiar interests of the South. In former times these Representatives were distinguished for courtesy, good-breeding and culture, as well as for statesmanship. Then it was that the Southern character for chivalry was established, which is now only traditional. It was under this regime that the South acquiaed its prestige in the nation, which it is now rapidly losing. Chivalry and courtesy are just a inseperable as chivalry and courage; but Southern chivalry, as exhibited by those who assume now to be its peculiar representatives. has neither good breeding nor courage. It va nts itself on its aptness to quarrel with non-combatants; on its willingness to give offense, with its hand on a revolver, ready to shoot down an unprepared man if he shows signs of resentment; and it even justifies an assault of superior numbers on an unsuspecting man, contrived with all the care and premeditation, and calculations how three fully armed persons might assault one defenseless man without danger, that would characterize paid assassins; and it in one word defines its own idea of chivalry, by pronouncing this act chivalrons. There can be no question that Southern power and influence have been sacrificed by this debasement of the character of its representation in Congress. But it would not be fair to infer that Southern character has like wise degenerated. The excitement on the negro question has been used for political effect in the South, even more than in the North. This being the readiest means for promoting the ambition of unscrupulous politicians, it has been agitated to the top of their bent; while the fact that throughout the South the great majority of the most substantial slave-holders never belonged to the Democratic party, has to a great extent retired them from political prominence, and left their representation chiefly in the hands of men of less character, and who had little or no interest in the institution which they professed to be so rabidly infected with. This is probably the explanation of the rapid degeneracy of the Southern representation, and of the introduction of the manners of the slave-driver into Congress in the place of the ancient courtesy and high-breeding of the slave-

The ill-effects of this fall chiefly on the South. It is natural that they who observe superficially, or whose observation is colored by anti-slavery sentiments, should attribute this to the degrading effects of slavery. It was perfectly natural that Mr. Sumner should make this state of things a charge against slavery itself, as he did in the following extract from his speech, although if he were better acquainted with Southern politics he would find it due to the facts to which we have referred, that the course of party polities has crowded out of public life a large portion of the most substantial slaveholders, who are naturally those of the most liberal culture:

"Slavery is founded on violence, as we have already too clearly seen; of course it can only be sustained by kindred violence; sometimes against the defenseless slave, sometimes against the freeman, whose indignation is aroused at the outrage. It is founded on brutal and vulgar pretensions, as we have already too clearly seen; of course it can only be sustained by kindred brutality and vulgarity. The denial of all rights in the slave can be sustained only by a disregard of other rights, common to the whole community, whether of the person, of the press, or of speech. Where this exists, there can be but one supreme law, to which all other laws, legislative or social, are subordinate; and this is the pretended law of slavery. All these things must be manifest in slave masters, and yet, unconscious of their true condition, they make boasts which reveal still further the unhappy influence.

"The swagger of a bully is called chivalry; a swiftness to quarrel is called courage; the bludgeon is adopted as a substitute for argu-"Slavery is founded on violence, as we have

"The swagger of a bully is called chivalry; a swiftness to quarrel is called courage; the bludgeon is adopted as a substitute for argument, and assassination is lifted to be one of the fine arts. Long ago it was fixed certain that the day which made a man a slave took half his worth away"—words from the ancient harp of Homer, resounding through long generations. Nothing here is said of the human being at the other end of the chain. To aver that on this same day all his worth is taken away might seem inhis worth is taken away might seem in-consistent with exceptions which we gladly recognize; but, alas! it is too clear, both from reason and from evidence, that, bad as slavery is for the slave, it is worse for the master.

It was unfortunate for the South that at the close of this elaborate effort to illustrate the debasing effects of slavery by the manners of the slave-holders, as exhibited in Congress, Mr. Chesnut should have replied with an exhibition of concentrated venom, and billingsgate, as if with a determination to clinch the truth of Mr. Sumner's illustrations by his own manners. To be received distinguished favor by the best society in Europe, is nowhere more admired than among Americans, especially in the South, and when Mr. Chesnut characterized the honorable reception which Mr. Sumner met abroad, as "ranging over Europe, snasking the Republican the true Democratic party? through back-doors and fawning at the feet of British aristocracy," he only showed how to-day, and Republicans will vociforate clamthe envy and malice of his own soul regarded orously that his decision on the Fugitive-slave honors because they were paid to Mr. Sum-He even was so stung beyond self-control that he taunted Mr. Summer with cowardice because of the punishment which he had received from a gang of assessins, as if the disgrace of this cowardly act could be transferred from South Carolina to the helpless victim of conspiracy. The South had no reason to complain of the discussion of slavery. They had challenged it in every way, and on every point argued by him. His speech was strictly within parliamentary roprieties and courtesy; and for the Souther members to be maddened by it and driven to personal abuse or to another resort to the massin-way of answering argument, exhibited the puerile weakness of challenging dis cussion, and then when they have had their say, without limit in the use of invective and abuse, wanting to plead something in the nature of the baby-act, assuming that it is a subject which will only bear discussion on on Unreal Mockery.

A correspondent of the New York Inc endent, in giving the reasons urged against Mr. Seward at Chicago, says that Egyptian Illinois and Indiana were strenuous in their opposition, for the reason that he is in favor of negro suffrage:

of negro suffrage:

"A prominent Indiana man said to me that that doctrine would never be allowed by their people, nor would he allow it. He was not going, he said, to have a 'nigger' voting alongside of him, or expressing his opinions, and although if I were to come to Indiana to argue the question, they would tolerate me, because I was a white man, yet if any nigger should try any such thing, they would split his head for him in two minutes."

Really this seems very singular in a Con-

Really this seems very singular in a Convention which resolved that "All men are created equal, and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights." It cems that the equality of all men is only good for the platform. In the candidate it would be fatal, and if a negro should repeat the second resolution of the platform in Indiana, the Republicans would split his head. The platform is like the heated one on which Bruin is taught the Terpsichorean art—the candidate must only touch it with a double-shuffle.

Republicanism started the principle negro rights, and ever since, the party has been like the magician in the German legend who conjured up a monster which he could not exorcise, and it became the terror of his life. Republicanism is constantly in terror of its great principle of negro rights. It puts the principle in the platform, but would split the head of a candidate who had ever advocated it.

If the negro is created equal to all man kind, what right have Republicans to revise the work of the Creator, and make him unequal? If the negro is endowed with inalienable human rights, he is endowed with them all, and what right have Republicans, who, according to their own platform, deprive him of a portion of his human rights, to condemn the South for depriving him of other human rights? While we admit such a palpable squint in our own moral and political vision what right have we to scratch out Southern yes on suspicion of a slight cast?

It would seem that the South hold sthe mos logical position. They deny the equality o the negro, and hold him in what they clain to be necessary and beneficial subjection The Republicans affirm his equality and his human rights, and then deprive him of them The Republican party has found the doctrine of negro human rights too heavy to carry it is now its terror, and the sooner it is aban doned the sooner that party will be relieved from the mortifying position of existing or a doctrine which it dare not face.

The Opera in Cincinnati.

Inspired by the splendid audiences that a tended his two concerts here last week. Stra kosch has returned and given us two night of opera. The "season" was as brilliant as brief, like the last flicker of a tallow dip. leaving a like pleasing perfume on the nemory. Responding to the generosit of our concert goers, as only a Strakosch can do, he has given no opera-scener and whole acts, at an incredible expense, with few performers, without chorus or orchestra. Opera, without orches tra! Mint-julep, with nothing but the mint The play of Hamlet, with every thing but "Hamlet" left out! Think of Italian opera, on a magnificent stage, in full costume, with a fifteen-hundred or two-thousand-dollar house, and poor Strakosch banging away at a piane for the orchestra! It was as enlivening as the music of a dog with a tin-kettle tied to his tail. How grateful our citizens ought to be to this munificent impressario for his generous efforts, to cultivate a taste for music of a high order in this city, entirely regardless of expense! How gratifying it is to know that the city journals appreciate it; especially the "Metropolitan facilities" for job printing; the whole-or none critics! How unfortunate that the resources of the English language are so inadequate to express the enthusiastic admiration which this generous and brilliant operation performance has excited in the job bosom!

A Hard Road To Travel. Republican principles having become rather delicate to handle now-a-days, a new one has been invented to fit the presenemergency-the principle of rotation in office. The State Convention is to be held at Columbus to-day, to nominate, among other officers, a Judge of the Supreme Court. Just before the last Convention, Judge Swan decided the Fugitive-slave Law Constitutional. For that the Convention superceded him; or, to use the phrase then current-slaughtered him. This year Judge Brinkerhoff's term expires. He decided the Fugitive-slave Law neonstitutional. Then the party exalted Judge Brinkerhoff. But to resolve and proclaim this Republican doctrine is very different from sustaining a Judge who upholds it, and putting him squarely before the people by a renomination. Judge Brinkerhoff is to be disposed of; but to slaughter one Judge last year for deciding a question one way; and another this year, for deciding the same question the other way, would place the party in a very sanguinary, as well as a very ridiculous light. So the principle of rotation in office was discovered; it is found that one term is all that is proper for a Judge of the Supreme Court. Furthermore, it is just found out that this was the very principle that slaughtered Judge Swan, and that the Fugitive-slave Law was never heard of in connection with the case. Besides, rotation is a Democratic principle, and wiff it not make

Law has nothing to do with it-is not even thought of; but it is all to carry out the great Republican principle of rotation—the princi-ple that governs the world; in fact, the true higher law. Republics may be guilty of ingratitude, but Republicans, never; it is only the universal principle of rotation.

The Battle of the Lives. Measrs, Follett, Foster & Co., the publishers of the biographies of Lincoln and Hamlin, write us as follows in regard to the statement of the Gazette that their publication is not authorized:

"Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Hamlin both authorized the life. Mr. Lincoln's Private Secretary, Mr. Nicolay farmishes the thread of the narrative. The matter of fact in Mr. Lincoln's history, the incidents and scenes, are taken down by our agent from the lips of his most intimate friends and those who had known him for years, among whom were Hon. J. D. Stewart, his old law partner, Ried Yates, Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. Butler, State Treasurer of Illinois, Mr. Green, with whom he kept store, Mr. Chass, with whom he mauled rails, and scores of others. The very virtue we claim for our edition is that it is authorized, authentic, and the material gathered from those who knew him intimately in every relation in life. We have lost the sale of some thousand copies by have lost the sale of some thousand copies by not hurrying our book out and by waiting to be authentic in every particular. We shall publish the book June 20."

To make this affair more interesting, it is eported that the chief editor of the Gazette writing a life of Lincoln and Hamlin Whether it is the life of which it says "the materials were collected from the most anthentic sources, including the candidates themselves," although insisting at the same time that the candidates have given no authority, is an impertinent question.

HOUSE-Mr. Grow, from the Joint Committee of Conference on the disagreement to the amendment to the Postoffice Deficiency the amendment to the Postoffice Deficiency Bill, reported that they were unable to agree. He moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate and agree to the Senate's amendment, with an amendment providing that service between Charleston and Key West shall be performed in the same time as is now prescribed in the contract with the Isabel, and that the Isabel shall be paid for the service performed at the rate prescribed in the contract. The amendment restores all the services discontinued or curtailed since the fourth of March, 1859, except the route from Nesho to Albuquerque and from Kansas City to Stockton, and part of route number 8,076, west of El Paso, leaving the discretion of the Postmaster-General on the restored service the same as under the existing law to discontinue or curtail services. ontinue or curtail services.

Mr. Grow's proposition under the operation of the previous question was agreed to—124 against 53. Mr. Gurley, from the Printing Committee, reported a resolution, which was passed, to print 50,000 extra copies of the mechanical part of the Patent Office Report, 10,000 copies for the use of the Office, and the remainder for the use of the Office, and the remainder for the use of the House.

The Light-house Appropriation Bill was considered and passed.

The House passed the following Senate joint resolutions:

Authorizing a vessel connected with the Coast Survey, to proceed beyond the limits of the United States, for the purposes connected with the observation of the eclipse of the sun, on the 18th of July;

To supply Switzerland and the Naval Academy each with a copy of the result of Wickes's exploring expedition;

To supply the Cherokee and Chickasaw nations with such copies of laws and journals as are furnished to the organized Territories. The House took a recess from half-past four to seven o'clock.

The House reassembled at seven o'clock. Several gentlemen obtained permission to print their speeches in the Globe.

Mr. McOwen objected to the printing of slanderous speeches on Southern institutions. It was decided that the objection came too late.

Mr. Erwin was then conducted to the Chair, when he delivered an address to the Convention, explaining the duty of the South: whose duty, he said, is to protect its own rights, to unfurl its flag to the breeze, and to firmly and proudly march on, demanding that the Constitution shall be preserved in word, and deed, and letter, and the equal rights of the States guaranteed. He would say nothing in favor or against going to Baltimore, but, whatever is done, we must strangle this serpent—squatter sovereignty. He denied the imputation that their purpose was disunion. The Northern Democrats have gone in pursuit of a false god that the South can not worship, and we must endeavor to bring them back to the true faith. A letter from the New York Commission

A letter from the New York Commissioners was read, declaring that they are here as promoters of peace and harmony, and that they are also here to give the assurance that New York would be found true to the South and true to the North, should a crisis arrive.

Col. Baldwin, of Syracuse, said that New York came here to assist to throw oil on the troubled waters, to urge you to do as you have done, to take no decisive action here, but to go to Baltimore.

The commissioners, he said, agreed with this Convention in deploring the nomination of an individual whose selection would be as injurious to himself as it would be destructive to the Democratic party, and danof the £6,000 his sister possessed, and the case will, we understand, come before the North, should a crisis arrive. Col. Baldwin, of Syracuse, said that New York came here to assist to throw oil on the troubled waters, to arge you to do as you have done, to take no decisive action here, but to go to Baltimore.

The commissioners, he said, agreed with this Convention in deploring the nomination of an individual whose selection would be as injurious to himself as it would be destructive to the Democratic party, and dangerous to the Union.

Mr. Baldwin proceeded at some length to deprecate the dissolution of the Union, and to say that he was one of those who could not see how the Union could be dissolved.

Mr. Dawson, of Georgia, called the gentleman to order.

Mr. Baldwin resumed, and continued for a few moments in the same strain, when Mr.

Of course, the constables had no power to intrude themselves among the happy family and tear away one of its members, so another plan had to be devised.

It was arranged that when the lady was walking on the terrace, in the rear of the dwelling of the Princeites, Mr. Price should jump the barriers dividing the grounds from a neighboring field, seize his partner, and trust to the protection of the policemen in waiting to prevent a breach of the peace from the gentlemen of the Agapemone assaulting him and rescuing her. him and rescuing her. This scheme, feasible as it looked, turned out to be difficult of execution The doughty Welshman patiently waited for a favorable opportunity to display his courage, but whenever his lady made her appearance in the gardens and on the terrace, she was guarded by a Princeite on either side, or was accompanied by one only with others at hand. The gallant liberation was not attempted, proceeding no further than a project, and recourse was consequently had to law.

Mrs. Price was at last summoned to appear before Court, and having done so, the lady deposed that she was not detained in the "Abode of Love' in defiance of her inclination, and that she was desirous of remaining in the blissful edifice. This reply defeated the aim of the husband, the judge at once declining to make an order for the restoration of the lady to her liege lord. Further proceedings are to be taken, for we hear that there is a question of money to be contested, besides a question of wife possession, Mr. Price being shut out from the enjoyment of any portion of his wife's £6,000, as well as from the fortune he may have owned himself prior to throwing himself into the arms and power of Mr. Prince.

It is stated that all the inmates of the Agapemone transfer their property to their chief, and sign a deed by which they agree to
